Why the Captain's Blog Is Significant

CAPT Inspector MILES dAvis - Army Capt Pip Day, 30 Oct 2026

1. It is the inspection record. Every grade I give has to trace back to an entry with a commit hash or a live link. Without the blog there is nothing to inspect against.

2. It enforces proof before claims. A claim with no entry does not exist; an entry with a hash can be checked by anyone, at any time.

3. It makes gaps visible. Officers name what is missing, so INCOMPLETE is fair, specific, and fixable instead of a surprise.

4. It keeps the chain of command intact. Questions are answered from the record first, then by the General, and never sent to Leon.

5. It is the unit's honest story, mistakes and warnings included. That is how the squad improves from one session to the next.
